Abstraction in language acquisition

Competence or Performance?

Written by Anne-Marieke Samson
Supervised by dr. P.R. Escudero Neyra
Second reader prof. dr. P.P.G. Boersma
August 2006

Contents

Chapter 0 Introduction 1

Chapter 1 Generative Grammar (Chomsky 1957, 1965) 6

1.0 Introduction
1.1 Grammatical rules 6
1.1.1 AUTOSYN 8
1.1.2 AUTOKNOW 10
1.2 Language Acquisition 11
1.2.1 AUTOGRAM 14
1.3 Summary and discussion 15

Chapter 2 Exemplar Theory and Data Oriented Parsing 18

2.0 Introduction 18
2.1.1 Speaker Variability 19
2.1.2 Ambiguity 21
2.2 Competence is performance 25
2.3 Language acquisition as a continuum 27
2.4 Summary and discussion 30

Chapter 3 Second Language Linguistic Perception 32

3.0 Introduction 32
3.1 The adult comprehension system 33
3.1.1 Exemplars or abstractions? 34
3.2 Acquisition of L1 35
3.2.1 Exemplars as a means of acquiring abstract knowledge 35
3.3 L2 Acquisition 39
3.3.1 Full copying 40
3.3.2 The role of GLA in L2 acquisition 41
3.3.3 End state 41
3.4 Summary and discussion 42

Chapter 4 Second Language and Universal Grammar 46

4.0 Introduction 46
4.1 Similarities and differences between L1 and L2 acquisition 48
4.2 Availability of UG 51
4.2.1 Wild grammars 51
4.2.2 Critical Period 52
4.2.3 Full and partial access and transfer 53
4.2.4 From initial to end state 55
4.3 Summary and discussion 57

Chapter 5 Discussion 58

5.0 Introduction 58
5.1 Concepts and categories 60
5.1.1 Exemplars and abstractions in cognitive psychology 62
5.2 Construction Grammar 65
5.3 Summary and discussion 70
5.3.1 Competing motivations 72

Chapter 6 Reanalysis Experiment 75

6.0 Introduction 75
6.2 Method of the experiment 79
6.2.1 Hypotheses 82
6.3 Results 84
6.3.1 Hypothesis 1 85
6.3.2 Hypothesis 2 86
6.3.3 Hypothesis 3 89
6.4 Summary and discussion 91

Conclusion 94

Appendix 1 Questionnaire 98

Appendix 2 Results of reanalysis questionnaire 100

Appendix 3 Tables of results of questionnaire 109

Bibliography 112